His flair for finishing tight games was again evident in the World Cricket League Division Three, where he scored a rapid 24 off just eight balls against Italy, hitting three consecutive sixes to seal victory. Over the years, he has demonstrated his ability to perform in pressure situations, including a sensational 85 off 21 balls in the Plate Final at the HK Sixes against Bangladesh, leading Hong Kong to victory.

Aizaz's first-class and List A careers further underline his all-round capabilities. In first-class cricket between 2015 and 2018, he played five matches, taking six wickets and contributing with the bat, while in List A matches he has scored over 1,000 runs and taken 66 wickets, including a best of 3 for 14. His T20 career, across all formats, encompasses 121 matches, in which he has scored 1,082 runs and taken 117 wickets, including a standout performance of 5 for 25. Known

Now, he is looking to return to England to continue his club career while pursuing opportunities in franchise cricket, offering teams a proven all-rounder capable of game-changing contributions with both bat and ball, as well as in the field.
