Aldaine Thomas is a dynamic wicket-keeper batter playing for the star-studded Jamaican side in West Indies domestic cricket.

Recommended by Jamaican Head Coach, Andre Coley, Thomas plays alongside a raft of Windies international stars, including the likes of Rovman Powell, Brandon King, Jermaine Blackwood, Assad Fudadin, John Campbell, and Nkruma Bonner, to name but a few.

Thomas is a competent batter capable of batting up top, or in the middle-order. He is a high-class gloveman, equally adept standing up to the stumps, or back to the quicks.

He broke into the Jamaican first-class side in 2016, having previously represented the country at Under-19 level. He has since played 39 matches across the three formats.

Thomas would have featured significantly more, however, he had to bide his time with former Windies gloveman Chadwick Walton donning the Jamaican gloves when not on National duty.

Thomas has been the main gloveman since, and now he's the cemented keeper, he is keen to venture to the UK for a club cricket stint in 2022.
