Aminul Islam Biplob is one of the most promising cricketers in Bangladesh.

With his all-round abilities as a talented batsman and skillful leg spin bowler, he has already shown glimpses of exceptional talent at both domestic and international levels.

His dedication, hard work, and natural cricketing instincts suggest that he has a very bright future ahead. If he continues to develop his skills and gain experience, there is no doubt that Biplob can become a key player for the Bangladesh national team for years to come.

Aminul made his international debut in 2019 and has represented his country 10 times in the T20 format. His skillset is ideal for this format as a sharp leg spinner with lots of variation and a skilful middle order batter who has the ability to adapt his game and play depending on the situation of the match. His last international game came in 2021 against Pakistan, notably taking the wicket of Babar Azam, however he has since fallen out of the national frame and is therefore targeting a season in the UK to sharpen his skills and test himself in new conditions in the hope of continuing to nudge the selectors down the line.

For any club seeking a genuine all rounder who can win games with both bat and ball, Aminul could just be a gem of a signing and has the potential to light up the UK club cricket scene in 2026.
