James Bradley (22), a talented wicket-keeper from Lancashire, England.

Bradley plies his trade for St Annes Cricket Club, one of the most historic sides in the Northern Premier Cricket League—a club famously associated with England legend Andrew Flintoff. Competing in the newly structured Northern Pyramid Cricket Competition, James has been a key figure behind the stumps for the First XI since 2021.

An attacking wicket-keeper, James is known for standing up to the stumps and maintaining constant pressure on opposition batters. His sharp glove work, energy, and game awareness make him a standout presence in the field.

While batting opportunities have been somewhat limited in Premier Cricket, James is more than capable of contributing valuable middle-to-lower order runs, particularly in pressure situations.

Off the field, Bradley has shown leadership qualities beyond his years—named Vice-Captain of the First XI and previously holding the honour of being the youngest player to captain the Club's First XI back in 2024.

Now seeking to broaden his cricketing experience, James is eager to spend the 2025/26 season overseas, where he can test himself in new conditions, continue developing his game, and immerse himself fully in club life.

A proven Premier League gloveman and a natural leader, James would be a fantastic addition to any club looking for a dedicated and dependable wicket-keeper.
