Mohammad Ammar is a rising star in Pakistani cricket—a stylish top-order batter and quality off-spinner who's made an immediate impact at the professional level.

At just 18 years old, Mohammad turned heads in his debut Quaid-e-Azam Trophy campaign last summer, finishing just outside the top 10 run-scorers with 373 runs at an impressive average of 41.44. It was a breakout performance that confirmed what many already believed: this young man has all the tools to go far, and international cricket is very much on his radar.

A Pakistan Under-19 international, Mohammad is already being talked about as one of the country's most exciting young prospects. He comes highly recommended by seasoned UK pro Khalid Usman, who praises not only his talent but also his character, professionalism, and energy—qualities that make him a standout both on and off the field.

A regular off-spin bowler throughout his junior career, Mohammad adds real value as a genuine all-rounder. Whether with bat or ball, he has the ability to influence games and has already proven he can hold his own against top-level opposition. One of the standout moments of his young career so far came when he scored a classy 86 batting at No. 4 for Bahawalpur, facing a strong Rawalpindi attack featuring international names like Shadab Khan and Umar Amin.

Under the guidance of Pakistan international Abid Ali, Ammar continues to develop in the right environment and is widely seen as a future star.

Now looking to bring his game to UK shores in 2026, Mohammad represents a fantastic overseas option for any club. He offers big runs, quality off-spin, and the kind of attitude and enthusiasm that lifts those around him.

If you're after a genuine all-rounder with the potential to go all the way, Mohammad Ammar is definitely one to watch—and one you'll be glad to have in your squad.
