Mohammad Arsal Sheikh is a well-rounded, talented cricketer who certainly looks poised for success, both in Pakistan's domestic circuit and as an overseas professional. As a top-order batter who also bowls frontline off-spin, his all-round ability makes him an attractive option, giving him the versatility that clubs look for in overseas pros.

His journey, from representing Pakistan Under-19s in the 2016 World Cup to establishing himself in first-class cricket with Islamabad, has been impressive. His experience playing in the 2016 U-19 World Cup, particularly against strong opposition like England's young talent (Sam Curran, Dan Lawrence, Saqib Mahmood), would have given him invaluable exposure to high-pressure, international cricket. Since then, his transition into the senior ranks, featuring regularly for Islamabad in Pakistan's top-tier domestic competitions, shows his consistency and ability to perform at the highest level.

What stands out with Mohammad is his readiness for a full season in the UK. With his all-round skill set and availability for an entire season, he ticks all the boxes for clubs looking to sign a professional for 2025. His ability to contribute with both bat and ball makes him an ideal player for clubs that need someone who can be relied upon in multiple roles, whether it's setting a strong total with the bat or breaking partnerships with his off-spin.

Given his current trajectory in Pakistan cricket, a season in the UK would not only help him further develop his game, but also give him the opportunity to make a significant impact in club cricket. His all-round potential and experience make him a strong recommendation for clubs looking for an established and reliable player in 2025. Mohammad also has the benefit of having access to accommodation in various areas, including Manchester, Oldham, Bolton and Bradford.
