Muhammad Naveed is an action-packed all-rounder currently playing professional cricket in Pakistan, known for his ability to impact the game with both bat and ball. A genuine dual threat, he operates as a hit-the-deck opening quick and an explosive middle-order batter, attributes clearly on display in his dynamic highlight footage.

Although his professional experience is still in its early stages—with just ten domestic appearances across formats (6 first-class, 1 List A, and 4 T20s)—Naveed has already earned selections in some of the most competitive teams in Pakistan's domestic structure. His most recent first-class stint came in the prestigious President's Trophy, where he turned out for the Water and Development Power Authority alongside the likes of Umar Akmal, under the leadership of Pakistan international Iftikhar Ahmed. Prior to that, he featured in the Quaid-e-Azam Trophy with the Lahore Whites, a side boasting top names such as Ahmed Shehzad, Abid Ali, Saad Nasim, and Aamer Jamal. His presence in squads filled with seasoned internationals speaks volumes about his raw talent and potential.

Naveed's pathway to first-class cricket was paved through standout performances at senior inter-district level in Lahore, where he built a reputation as a dominant performer. With a highest score of 219 and impressive averages of 43 with the bat and 17 with the ball at that level, it's clear that his skill set is well-rounded and impactful. While he's yet to fully translate this success into consistent performances at the professional level, all signs point to a player with significant upside.

Due to missing out on selection for the Pakistan Cricket Board's proposed domestic tournament scheduled for May to August 2025, Naveed is now seeking an opportunity to play club cricket in the UK next summer. With his proven ability, strong desire to make his mark, and a point to prove, he is poised to be a standout performer in the 2026 season. For any UK club seeking an aggressive seam-bowling all-rounder with professional pedigree and real potential, Muhammad Naveed represents an exciting and high-upside signing.
