Natthakan Chantham is a Thai international cricketer who plays as a right-handed opening batter for the Thailand women's national cricket team. A key member of Thailand's top order since emerging at international level, she is widely regarded as one of the country's leading batters and an influential figure in the continued development of Thai women's cricket.

Chantham first appeared in a global qualifying event at the 2017 Women's Cricket World Cup Qualifier and made her Women's Twenty20 International debut during the 2018 Women's Twenty20 Asia Cup. Her performances quickly established her as a cornerstone of Thailand's batting line-up, combining composure at the crease with the ability to build and accelerate innings when required. In 2018 she was also selected for the ICC Women's Global Development Squad, where she gained valuable experience competing against teams from the Women's Big Bash League.

One of the defining moments of her career came at the 2020 ICC Women's T20 World Cup in Australia, where she finished as Thailand's leading run-scorer with 103 runs in four matches. In Thailand's final match of the tournament she scored 56 against Pakistan, registering the country's first half-century in a Women's T20 World Cup and sharing a 93-run opening partnership with Nattaya Boochatham. Her performances have continued to strengthen Thailand's presence in international cricket, including scoring her maiden Women's One Day International century—102 against the Netherlands women's national cricket team in 2022.

At franchise level, Chantham made history in 2020 when she became the first Thai cricketer to play in a professional Twenty20 franchise league after being selected for the Trailblazers in the Women's T20 Challenge in India. She has since also represented Velocity and Spirit, gaining experience in elite competitive environments.

Across formats, Chantham has been one of Thailand's most consistent performers. In Women's One Day Internationals she has scored 630 runs in 14 matches at an average of 45.00, including one century and seven half-centuries. In Women's Twenty20 Internationals she has accumulated 2,496 runs in 115 matches with a strike rate of 97.00, including one century and eleven fifties. Her impact has also been recognised internationally, including a nomination for the ICC Women's Associate Cricketer of the Decade in 2020.

Chantham continues to pursue opportunities that challenge her at the highest level of the game. Motivated by personal growth and performance development, she aims to expand her experience in elite environments while contributing to the continued progress of Thailand on the global cricket stage.
